

ESQUIRE
REMOTE DEPOSITION
SOLUTIONS:
DEPOSE WORLDWIDE
WITHOUT LEAVING TOWN.

Depositions are the most important component of many cases. But they are expensive and time-intensive.

Esquire Remote Deposition Solutions let you conduct your deposition anywhere – from anywhere. No more shipping expenses. No more driving 200 miles for a 30-minute deposition or flying cross country and being out of pocket for hours.

Safe and secure, with government-level encryption, Esquire Video Conferencing brings together as many parties as needed. You can be in one location, opposing attorneys in another, clients in yet another, and the witness in a different location. And it works across platforms, from a legacy room system to a laptop, tablet, or smartphone.

One important feature is that the technology places no additional burden on a witness who is trying to answer questions. In many situations, he or she may only have to look at a screen and verify information.

More than just video. It's LiveLitigation.

LiveLitigation allows additional support from your team for even more collaboration.

All parties see introduced electronic exhibits. Exhibits are electronically stamped, saved, and accessible immediately. Track the deposition using LiveLitigation's web-based realtime functionality to monitor responses and create reports during the proceeding.

During the deposition, support staff back in the office can upload additional documents and communicate with attorneys almost as easily as being in the same room.

Leverage technology and maintain more control over the entire deposition process. This is how Esquire helps you do depositions right.

Client Success Stories.

- A team of Atlanta attorneys held over 150 depositions at a hotel in Louisiana. Rather than ship boxes of documents, they created a calendar of deponents with documents linked to each. They held each deposition using realtime so they could review the testimony as it happened - then review again later that evening to prepare for the next day. If a deponent didn't appear, they could easily move on to the next one. Deponents simply watched the exhibits on the screen and answered questions.
- Defense attorneys in San Diego, joined by an interpreter and court reporter in a conference room, deposed two defendants in South Korea. The defendants' attorney attended in Los Angeles, and the client attended from Florida, reading the transcript as it was created. All parties were able to review exhibits as they were introduced and marked.
- One side in an arbitration case followed the realtime transcript on individual iPads in the room, while their off-site team back in the law firm's office also followed and provided advice.

A breakdown of the features:

- Video conference or witness streaming
- Realtime without software installation
- Keyword and root word search
- Individual line highlighting with annotated reporting
- No scanning, printing, binding, or shipping exhibits
- Documents can be uploaded and annotated during the deposition
- Leave the proceeding with the official exhibits
- Secure chat within your group with no record of it at end of proceeding
- Government-level security
- Connections and access tested 48 hours before the deposition
- 24/7 tech support
- All remote deposition tools available on one screen

Depose worldwide without leaving town.