

ESQUIRE REMOTE REPORTER CONDUCT DEPOSITIONS ONLINE

As litigation continues to grow and travel becomes more challenging, attorneys and their teams require the critical assurance that a professional court reporter is available – when needed – to cover proceedings.

Esquire's Remote Reporter is a flexible, online solution that leverages technology to handle the increasing number of depositions, without sacrificing quality and industry standards.

For more than 20 years, attorneys, their teams and clients have leveraged Esquire's videoconferencing services to safely and securely conduct depositions.

Esquire Remote Reporter extends our videoconferencing services by supporting remote witness swear-in and remote record capture. We have expanded this deep understanding to now include court reporters who use videoconferencing to work virtually.

With the court reporter directly connected to the attorney and the witness, all parties are remote and can participate in a safe and secure online environment. The proceeding is conducted just as it would be if the parties were physically located in the same room.

Key Benefits:

- Esquire certified Remote Reporters are readily available
- Handle large volumes of depositions
- Reduce deposition scheduling delays
- Keep your litigation calendar on track
- Use any video room system, mobile device or computer with camera
- Convenient, safe and secure online workspace

What makes Esquire's Remote Reporter service different?

- Our entire focus is on ensuring the record is captured accurately and efficiently and you receive the high-quality transcripts you expect.
- Our court reporters are trained and certified by Esquire. Extensive training includes: technical videoconference training, remote swearing in of the witness, capturing a quality record with videoconferencing, and submitting exhibits.
- An Esquire Service Delivery Coordinator is available before, during and after the deposition to ensure smooth execution for all attending parties.
- Esquire Remote Reporters conduct the proceeding with Esquire's professional videoconferencing solution.
